He was also responsible for all Securities and Exchange Commission reporting at Valera.

Mr. Drechsler's vast public company and financial reporting duties have also included serving as Controller for a variety of companies, including Abbott Laboratories' Point of Care Division, which was publicly-traded as i-Stat Corporation prior to being acquired by Abbott, and Biomatrix, Inc., which was publicly-traded prior to being acquired by Genzyme. He graduated Magna Cum Laude from Villanova University with a B.S. in Accounting and received his certified public accountant license in New Jersey.

"With his expertise and leadership in finance and in operations more broadly at several life sciences companies, Andy will bring extensive breadth and capabilities to the Insmmed management team," said Will Lewis, President and CEO of Insmmed. "I look forward to working closely with him as we pursue the next stage of Insmmed's growth."

"Insmmed has developed a highly innovative and differentiated product candidate that has the potential to change the lives of patients suffering from serious lung infections," said Mr. Drechsler. "The momentum of the ongoing clinical trials for this promising product candidate in combination with our solid balance sheet provides a strong foundation for our future."
